

SAFETY TOOLBOX TALK

Ref:	070	Author:	Lee Hardy	Date:	08.02.2024
Topic:			Near Misses
This briefing is not intended to tell you how to do your jobs, it is designed to help keep you safe. We want everybody to be able to return home safely to their family and friends at the end of each day.

Today's Near Miss is tomorrow's accident.

Near-misses are incidents that don't cause any harm or an accident but could have potentially caused an injury or ill health. You might be tempted to brush off near-miss incidents as no one gets hurt, but it's vital you don't ignore them. Fox Brothers encourage all members of staff to report near miss incidents

Just because it was a near-miss this time, doesn't mean that it will be next time.

Investigating near misses provides the benefits of accident investigation without the consequences.

Near miss reports help us improve systems and processes, implement additional controls on risks and identify further training requirements.

If any of the following statements relate to something you've witnessed or are currently experiencing, it should be reported as a near miss.

- Someone's going to get hurt.
- There are corners being cut to "get the job done".
- It doesn't look right.
- It is obviously dangerous and shouldn't be.
- It isn't planned or managed.
- It should be supervised.
- There is no risk assessment in place.
- It is a rushed job and not to usual standards.
- It is unsafe and shouldn't be.
- It is unsanitary and shouldn't be.
- You're not trained to do the task you're being asked to do.

Near Misses are not about blaming anybody, it's about trying to keep everyone safe, and they can be reported anonymously.
